

The Bates' of Hemlock

A Short Family Biography Outline

By
Ray Henry
March 17, 2008

Thomas Bates was born in England on the 4th of August, 1827. He married Hepzibah Woodstock, also of England. They had 5 children, Richard, Alfred, Arthur, Sarah Ann and Eliza Jane. Arthur remained in England his entire life. Thomas was a master ironworker. His son, Richard, who was known fondly as "Harry", learned the trade from his father. Together they had built locks that still stand in Leeds and Birmingham (England). When my Great Grandfather Bates (Richard "Harry") was seventeen, the family came to Hemlock (about 1873) and there they lived for the rest of their lives. It is unclear whether Thomas and Richard came to America, and Hemlock, because of their expertise, or if the challenge of building a water main from Hemlock Lake to Rochester came up after they arrived. In either case, they worked on the first conduit to be built from Hemlock Lake to the Rush Reservoir and the Highland Reservoir until its completion. Reportedly, Thomas was a foreman.

Although these pictures were probably taken about 1914, during the construction of Conduit III (See Water Works Timeline below from the City of Rochester Webpage), it is symbolic of the immense job that each conduit's construction entailed.

Hemlock & Canadice Lake Water Supply History

- 1876 - Conduit I, Rush Reservoir and Highland Reservoir construction was completed and started to deliver water to the City's distribution system.
- 1894 - Conduit II construction was completed, including 1550-foot Hemlock Lake intake pipe and two-mile brick tunnel.
- 1896 - City purchased St. James Hotel and 55 other buildings on Hemlock Lake. Acquisition and removal of all Hemlock and Canadice Lakes' shoreline properties was completed in the early 1950's.
- 1901 - Hemlock Gatehouse was constructed.
- 1902 - City began a program to reforest recently acquired property. Over three million trees were planted over the next 30 years.
- 1909 - Cobbs Hill Reservoir construction was completed.
- 1918 - Conduit III construction was completed.
- 1919 - Canadice tunnel was put in service to divert water from Curved Dam on Canadice Outlet into Hemlock Lake.

- 1927 - Hemlock dike was raised.
- 1936 - New spillway was built at Hemlock Lake.
- 1937 - Canadice Lake dam was built.

After completion of the Water Line, Thomas and "Harry" stayed on in Hemlock and opened up their Cutlery and Ironsmith business in a shop on Water Street next to the entrance to the Hemlock Fair Grounds. Their home was immediately next door (west of) the shop. A description of the shop and grounds is included in the memories herein of Harry's granddaughter Clara Bates Allen. The home and shop building still exist.

The following are the Memories of Clara Bates Allen, my dad's first cousin in a letter to me, Ray Henry, dated July 17, 1982.

"Great-Grandpa, Thomas, was a lay preacher in the Baptist church and people said there was no finer man than Thomas Bates. (Ray Henry has a copy of one of his sermons). After his wife died, he and Richard and Clara (nee Malabar) lived together. I have the feeling that his wife (Hepzibah) died in England. (Ray Henry thinks not, because he believes she is buried with her husband and family in Union Cemetery, Big Tree Rd., between Livonia and Hemlock.) Clara Malabar Bates died within 2 months of her third child's (Leona's) birth."

Ray Henry collection

The Bates Family at their home on Water Street, Hemlock ca. 1910.

"Richard and Clara had Alice, Arthur (my father), and Leona (Ray Henry's grandmother) whose birth resulted in her mother's death, and the two men (Thomas and Richard "Harry") brought up those children alone. Can you imagine them with a new-born girl, the others 8 and 6 respectively? Well, undaunted and courageous, they did a terrific job. Grandpa made a poor but respectable living with his blacksmithing and carpentry, known for miles for his workmanship. His knives made of Sheffield steel from England and handles he made in his shop were the best ever, attested to by all the people who were lucky enough to purchase one. When I was a little girl, we'd go to Hemlock weekends, alternating with those at my mother's folks' and, of course, the big event was the annual Hemlock Fair. Since Grandpa's house was the last before entering the fairgrounds, he'd set up a table and sell all he could, the location ideal as the cars would have to stop in line for tickets. Walkers were corralled too, of course. What fun! Some of my happiest memories are of that shop whose interior and contents plus the peculiar smell are just as vivid today as ever. Honestly, I could draw a map - if that were my talent - of the whole place from the time one went in the door through the rooms or compartments, stepping around or over crates Grandpa made, past the workbenches and shelves of tools, picking the way on the sawdust floors until reaching that big room in the back with the forges and other machines. I can feel the heat, see the flame, hear the unique hum as that furnace burned and the metal was molded and then hammered into shape. The hammering had its own sound and I never tired of watching the process. Mother would say I shouldn't bother Grandpa and try to keep me out, but wasn't I lucky to have a benevolent, dear Grandfather who knew he was forming memories in a little girl's mind and heart. I was good --- had to be!!"

"Grandpa loved flowers, his long fence between the lawn and garden of vegetables galore completely covered with sweet peas, the beauty of which was never seen elsewhere. There were rows and rows of more flowers in the garden, but the sweet peas were the focus and a picture to be admired and remembered. The huge grape arbor, its boughs winding and covering on four sides and the top, the coolest, loveliest retreat on a hot summer's day, was another special place. I suppose the buyers of the house tore that down? I must drive past that home although I'm torn between wanting to see it again and desiring the wonderful pictures indelibly imprinted on my mind."

"Do you like oysters? If so, blame it on Grandpa Bates (Harry) who doted on them. Any Saturday we might drive up to Hemlock because Daddy wanted to check up on "Father" and there he'd be sitting at the table with a saucer full of those slimy, wiggly animals slithering around in a cup or more of Vinegar, a slice of bread and butter making the Saturday night supper complete, much to the dismay of his son. Saucers were big and heavy then. Grandpa was happy and satisfied, Daddy was upset, Mom was resigned and, impressionable Clara Gertrude was forever turned off the succulent oyster in the raw. Daddy was worried for days that his father didn't eat right, but the stubborn and independent Englishman lived to a ripe old age of 82. He worked until the day he had his heart attack, five days before he left this world and a legacy of decency, love, goodness, values and beautiful characteristics to his children and families."

"Religiously, the family was Anabaptists originally, I'm told. They're akin to Mennonites, I believe, and indirectly to Baptists. Your grandmother (Leona Bates Henry) used to attend the Methodist Church in Hemlock more than the Baptist."

Notes for Theron Wendall Henry:

Theron Wendall Henry was my father. He was born the second of three children to Raymond Samuel and Leona Bates Henry in 1919. He was a very bright redhead, attending school in district schools in the Towns of Richmond and East Bloomfield, and attended high school at East Bloomfield Academy. He did not finish high school in his teen years, having quit to go to work at sixteen. In his later years (I'm not sure of the dates) he received his high school diploma through the New York State program.

The Henry's (Ray, Leona, & children) lived in several places in the Richmond and East Bloomfield areas, including the home on the corner of McAnn Rd. & Routes 5 & 20 in Centerfield. The home is now a Bed & Breakfast.

Notes for Naomi Bernadette Smith:
